

Fund IRL

MINNESOTA

*Turn social media accountability into opportunity.
Fund youth well-being.*

State governments are suing social media companies for knowingly designing their platforms to keep young people hooked, harming youth mental health and safety.

Fund IRL is a nationwide group fighting to make sure money from social media lawsuits helps youth! Currently, there is no guarantee Minnesota will use this money to help young people through things like youth programs and mental health support.

FundIRL MN believes this money should pay for:

Afterschool & Summer Activities

Get off the screen and hang out in person.

- Join sports, arts, STEM clubs, or leadership groups.
- Try new things, make real friends, and connect with helpful mentors.
- Make these programs free and easier to get to for kids in Minnesota.

Tools for Staying Safe Online

Learn how to handle social media without stress.

- Get tips directly from older students and peers on how to stay safe online.
- Learn how to deal with mean or bad posts and keep your screen time healthy.

Mental Health Support

Real support when social media or life gets overwhelming.

- Get expert help and crisis support if phone overuse or stress gets too heavy.
- Train student helpers so kids can talk to someone their own age.
- Provide counseling that respects every kid's background and culture.

Scan here to sign the petition
“Yes! Social media money should support youth”

www.igniteafterschool.org/fund-irl-mn

